Both the office and the person of the judge were alike held in veneration and respect among the Jews (cf. Job xxix.7-10), who were, as a people, remarkably sensitive as to the strict and impartial administration of justice by their judges. Under the theocracy, to seek a legal decision was to inquire of God, as the author of all law (Ex. xviii. 15), and the sentence given was said to be God s judgment, and its source was accordingly regarded as divine. The title Gods is sometimes applied to the judges (Ex. xxii. 28, and cf. Ps. lxxxii. 1, 6). Those who were to be appointed to the office of judge were to be able men, such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness, men who would not wrest...
